United Church Notes

Our young people met in the church on Wednesday evening, March 23rd, for their regular meeting with a record attendance of more than 60. The meeting was opened with the usual devotional service. Prayer was offered by the minister, Mr. Longmire, and Marjorie McFarland gave the scripture reading. The topic was given by the president of our Y.P.U., Kay Shaw. The speaker dealt especially with character building and our influence in helping or hindering of others, and made a very effective appeal to all for the building of character upon true Christian principles.

The following comprised the program committee for the evening: Annetta McMillan, Irma Tweedie and Ray Locke. Special musical selections were supplied by the young people's orchestra, and two court scenes added entertainment to this part of the evening's activities.

Services for Sunday, April 3rd: Irma Sunday School, 11 a.m. Public Worship, 7:30 p.m.

Prayer and fellowship service, on Wednesday evening, at 7:30. A hearty welcome to all.

—Rev. E. Longmire, Minister.

Murray McFarland Dies In Edmonton

Residents of the Irma district were shocked last Tuesday on hearing of the death the previous evening of Murray, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Ross McFarland. Apparently Murray had not been suffering from any disease until about March 13th, when he was taken ill and removed to the Wainwright Hospital for examination and treatment. After a couple of days he was brought home. As his health did not seem to improve he was then taken to the University hospital, Edmonton for further examination. From then until his death about ten days later the best of medical and surgical treatment was given him but all to no avail. Murray was nine years old last January and he leaves to mourn besides his parents, one sister, Marjorie, and one brother, Ross. The sympathy of the entire district is extended to the bereaved family.

CHAPTER VIII.—Continued

He scaled Lester's Wall, not soaring over it, but scrambling laboriously over it, and made his way to the fox burrow. He expected to find the fox going about its domestic duties innocent of the conspiracy afoot to deprive it of its brush and its future.

He saw no fox. He approached the entrance to its subterranean abode. Ten yards from it he stopped short. At his feet the green grass was stained with red blood. Now he understood the full meaning of a remark Captain Duff-Hooper had made at dinner the night before.

"We should have jolly good sport," the captain had said. "Farmers report numerous foxes in the neighborhood. This morning Lord Follstone's pack had a splendid run. The fox nearly got to earth but they finally made the kill in Kingsley's Copse."

This then must be Kingsley's Copse, and that arterial smear the life-blood of the homing fox, mangled in its own front-yard, just two frantic leaps from sanctuary.

Ernest gazed out a sound half groan, half oath.

"Too late," he said.

He bent down to examine the entrance to the hole. He smelled a foxy smell. For some reason, at that moment, he felt an impulse to run back to the castle and tag Duff-Hooper on his back teeth with a heartfelt hawkeyer.

As he was about to turn away from the hole, he heard a sound which started off as a defiant bark and ended in a frightened whimper. Thrusting his arm to the shoulder into the burrow, he touched fur. He drew out a feebly squirming cub. The little creature made it plain that after waiting all night for the return of its mother, it was very hungry. Ernest stooped the cub under his coat to keep it warm. He was in no danger of sharing the fate of the legendary Spartan boy, for the orphan was so young it could not bite, only nuzzle.

Ernest conveyed his captive back to the castle and smuggled it up to his tower room. He made no mention of it to any one for he had a feeling that they might consider that he was giving aid and comfort to the enemy in this one-sided war.

Having bedded the cub down on his overcoat in a closet, he suggested the bell-rope and summoned Sloat. "Get me a jug of warm milk at once, please," Ernest said.

"Very good, sir."

"And see that a jug of milk is brought here every morning and evening."

"Yes, sir."

"I intend to take milk baths," said Ernest. "I hear they are good for the complexion."

Sloat departed to get the milk and to spread the news of this latest vagary of the mad American.

His soft-footed return found Ernest in the closet sothing the cub by stroking it. Ernest popped out of the closet and slammed shut the door. "Thanks, Sloat," he said, taking the jug.

A plaintive whine came from the closet.

"What's that, sir?" asked Sloat.

"What's what?"

"That sound, sir."

"I heard no sound."

Once again the cub voiced its need for nourishment.

"There it is again, sir," said Sloat. "It sounds like the cry of a very young baby."

"It is," said Ernest.

Sloat tried hard to remember that a well-trained servant does not show his emotions, especially the most un-British of them, inquisitiveness. But curiosity scored yet another triumph over tact.

"Yours, sir?" inquired Sloat.

"Naturally."

"Boy or girl, sir?"

"One of each."

"How old are they, sir?"

"Born this morning."

"Indeed, sir. And might I inquire, sir, where their mother is?"

"Oh, she's been done away with," said Ernest.

"Done away with, sir?" quavered Sloat.

"My word!" was all Sloat could say. "My word!"

He seemed about to flee from this unnatural father and possible cannibal, when Ernest said:

"I'm joking, of course. There's no baby in the closet."

The cub made a liar of him with a yelp.

"You fooled you, Sloat."

"I've astonished me, sir."

"I'm studying ventriloquism," explained Ernest. "The earl is teaching me to throw my voice."

Sloat relaxed.

"I should like to learn how, sir. I could teach Cook."

The cub made sounds fairly lusty for one so young.

"Am I good or am I good?" said Ernest.

"Marvelous, sir," said Sloat. "I could swear there was baby, or a young animal in there."

"That's what practice does," said Ernest. "You may go now, Sloat."

"Thank you, sir," said Sloat, and bore his latest bulletin from bedlam to a waiting servant's hall.

Among those into whose receptive ears Sloat poured this and other tales of the corky conduct of the castle's tenant was Babette, maid to the Duchess of Beddingdon. Babette was from the south of France, which produces many poets but few reporters. The narrative with which Babette regaled her mistress while putting out that lady's evening face did not lack color however it may have sinned on the score of accuracy.

"Quel type d'homme!" said Babette. "Il est toqué."

"Don't jabber," said the duchess. She was an extensive lady known in her circle as "High-pockets."

"It is cracked in the kettle, that monsier American," said Babette.

"Shouldn't wonder," drawled the duchess. "Must be if he's a friend of George Bingley."

"This so droll one keeps bebes in his closet, and never wears the clothes," went on the maid.

"Never? Frugal of him," said the duchess.

"But he is of a richness formidable," said Babette etching on an eye-brow, "and, on dit, he has the sheep's eyes for Lady Rosa."

"Mmmmm," said the duchess. "Thought she was booked to marry that stick of a tin soldier."

"The betting in the servants' hall is even money to the contrary, Madame la Duchesse."

The Duke of Beddingdon, Bumpy to his intimates, came in to dress for dinner. He was an angular, bony chatter-box stooped by the weight of a mustache shaped like the horns of a water-buffalo. He had attempted to dye it red but it had come out an off-shade of purple.

As he insinuated himself into his stiff shirt his mats relayed to him the tid-bits about Ernest.

"Fella belongs in a loony-bin," said the duke. "Old Bingo was yarning about him at the club. Says he's not a bad sort, really, and scandalously rich. Why, the fella stumped up a thousand of the best for a month's rent of this old hut without batting an eye."

"Babette says he owns the Mississippi River."

"Girl always exaggerates," said the duke. "Doubt if he owns more than half of it."

Dressed, he transported himself and mustache to the Great Hall, had three quick neat brandies, and passed on his version of the Ernest saga to a fellow guest, Major General Sir Frederick Cowley, K.C.B., known in the artillery as "Mooley Cowley" because of his name and a noticeable resemblance to that useful animal.

"Fella has a closefist of squawling babies shoots foxes, and this is he—somebody in 'Tvanhoe', but he own most of the Mississippi River," said the duke.

"Fancy!" said the major general. "Think I'll broach the subject of a slight loan," said the duke, "say five thousand for a starter."

"Shouldn't."

"Why not, Mooley? Fella's a Yank. All Yanks have a weakness for titles. And I'm a real duke, aren't I? I'll wager you sumpence the fella will be tickled plaid to let me have say, ten thousand—"

"Doubt it."

"Why?"

"Nobody is that crazy."

"You're probably right," said the duke, sadly. "Well, Mooley, old sprout, here's nice in your wig."

"Toot-toot," said Sir Frederick, and they clinked glasses.

Sir Frederick handed on to the Hon. Mrs. Fordyce his information about Ernest, and she told Ronnie Pym, and he told Lady Gwladys Wotton, and she told Colonel Pringle, D.S.O., and he told the Countess of Bathberry and she rushed to the powdering-room to scribble down the data for use in the next "Dashing Out With a Dowager" column, which, under the pseudonym of "Goddess Gaiety," she conducted in one of the largest London dailies.

Ernest, unaware of the interest with which his advent was awaited, was playing nurse-maid to the fox cub behind locked doors, when he heard a thumping at his door.

"Who is it?" he called out.

"Me," replied the voice of the Earl of Bingley. "May I come in, please?"

"One moment," said Ernest.

He bent close to the little fox.

"Now be a good cub and keep quiet," he whispered.

The cub, full of milk and contentment, was licking the polio of Ernest's best shoes as he closed the door on it.

Ernest admitted the earl who was wearing the dinner suit he had acquired on his return from the Beer War. Already the bow of his black tie had ridden around his collar and was doing out of sight.

The earl sniffed.

"I say, what sort of perfume do you use, Ernest?" he asked.

"I never use any, sir."

"Don't you notice a rather racy aroma?"

"No, sir."

Magic Eye For Pilots

Bomber Crew Can See Tons 50 To 100 Miles Away

J. L. Baird, television pioneer, who left for Australia, disclosed that during the voyage he would carry out experiments with a "magic eye" to enable pilots to see through fog for a distance of 30 miles.

Mr. Baird said he had already carried out experiments in an airplane at Crystal Palace.

The set, which can be comfortably carried in the cockpit of a plane, enables the crew of a bomber to see on a ground-glass screen a town from 50 to 100 miles away," he declared. "The invention can be used for reconnaissance work, and will be invaluable to scouting planes, enabling them to ascertain the position of troops who are deployed."

Drama Festival Adjudicator

Enlight Drama Editor And Critic Of New York Has Been Appointed

An eminent Toronto-born author, drama editor and critic, Barrett H. Clark of New York city will act as adjudicator of the Dominion Drama Festival to be held in Winnipeg May 16-21 inclusive.

Colonel H. C. Osborne, honorary director of the Dominion Drama Festival, announced that Mr. Clark had accepted the invitation to adjudicate the festival finals.

Mr. Clark was born in Toronto in 1890 and was educated at the University of Chicago and the University of Paris. Shortly before the war he began to take an active interest in the theatre in Europe and wrote and published translations of French plays.

He also contributed articles on the European theatre to prominent New York newspapers and later became regular critic and occasional contributor to various American magazines.

His theatre activities have been manifold. He was dramatic director for the United States war department at Camp Humphreys, Va., in 1918; associate director, foreign language information service, Washington, and New York; play reader for the Theatre Guild and on the board of directors of the Group Theatre and Theatre Union. At present he is executive director of the Dramatists Play Service, Incorporated of New York.

Among books he has written are "The Continental Drama of To-day," 1914; "The British and American Drama of To-day," 1915; "European Theories of the Drama," 1918; "Eugene O'Neill, His Methods and His Plays," 1920; and "An Hour of American Drama," 1921.

Mr. Clark has published a number of pamphlets on Paul Green, Maxwell Anderson and other playwrights and has in preparation, "Recollections of George Moore."

Last year's adjudicator for the Dominion Drama Festival was Michel St. Denis, noted French playwright and stagecraftsman, who operates a theatrical school in London.

Metropolitan Police Horse Won Prizes For Being Well Trained

The Metropolitan Police bay mare Juno, which won the King George V. Cup for the best trained horse at Richmond Royal Horse Show in 1933 and 1936, has left its stable at Richmond police station to become one of King George VI's chargers. Juno is 11 years old and has been at Richmond since 1931. At the Royal Horse Show she did not take any notice of flags, umbrellas and rattlers waved at her by Sir Walter Gilbey and other dignitaries. She won the gold cup presented by Lord Londsdale for the best trained horse at the Metropolitan police show at Imber Court in 1933 and 1936.

Torpedo Armaments

Will No Longer Be Used On British Battleships

The torpedo, so-called excess baggage on capital ships, no longer will be used on British battleships. It is still, however, considered one of the most potent armaments carried by smaller craft. Consequently the most modern British destroyers are being fitted with 10 torpedo tubes, instead of four mounted by the pre-war vessels.

Britain's five new battleships of the King George V. type are being designed without torpedo armaments, while fittings are being removed from other ships as part of general reconditioning plans.

The Cathedral of Seville, Spain, is the second largest Gothic edifice in Europe. It was dedicated in 1402 and contains the tomb of Christopher Columbus.

Refused To Give Up

Fastest Mile Run By Boy Who Overcame Handicap

For man to run a mile in four minutes has long been regarded as on the verge of the impossible. Those who know something of the limit of human capacity have hesitated to say it could not be done. But they have pointed out that the fastest mile ever put together on paper—a composite of the fastest quarters run by Taber, Lovelock, Cunningham and San Roman—adds up to three minutes and 58 4/5 seconds. Thus the "dream mile" could be no more than 10 yards or so slower than the greatest composite runner at the distance.

At Hanover, N.H., two whole seconds were clipped from the world park, to bring the four-minute mile appreciably nearer the range of the possible. Glenn Cunningham, who a few weeks ago had told an interviewer that some day someone would hit 4:04 "but it won't be me," came within two-fifths of a second of beating his own prophecy. His time was four minutes and 42.5 seconds. The fastest mile before this had been run by the London bank clerk, Woodson, on a heavy track. A race between this pair, under conditions as nearly ideal as those at Hanover, would by all sports logic be an event of the century.

No comment on Cunningham's feat afoot would be complete without citing again the personal triumph which his success on the track embodies. As a lad, his life was despaired of for weeks after his legs had been frightfully burned in a schoolhouse fire. He took to running to repair the effects of the injury, as Detroit's Bill Bonthron also did, after being burned by a high tension wire. In overcoming a physical handicap both went far beyond the ordinary capacities of men. It would be a pleasing consolation to all sportsmen if the dream mile, whoever he is, were such a representative of the power of human resolution to defeat the casualties of fate.—Detroit News.

Would Control Bootleggers

Want Amendment To Liquor Control Act In B.C.

Vancouver police commissioner has decided to request Attorney-General Gordon Wisner to introduce in the British Columbia legislature an amendment to the Liquor Control Act giving police authority to declare bootlegging establishments public places within the meaning of the act.

Chief Constable W. W. Foster said that until the act was amended "it is absolutely impossible to enforce that measure of control which it was apparently intended to exercise."

A Lucky Accident

Opened Way To Fame And Fortune For Screen Actor

It was 30 years ago that Andy Devine, a child of 3½ years, tumbled out a couch in the family's modest little home in Kingman, Arizona. Clutched in his fingers was a long, supple silver of wood, which the child had slipped from the seam of a window shade. The little stick broke, a jagged end punctured Andy's throat—and there was set in motion a strange series of physiological disturbances that eventually led Andy to the gates of fame and fortune. That unhappy incident marked the birth of the now famous "gravel voice," a low rumbling disturbance or a high screeching whine that Andy is able to control at will—and which, counting screen and radio contracts, nets him in the neighborhood of $3,500 a week.

Liner Of The Future

Will Be Streamlined Glass-Enclosed Speedboat Is Prediction

The Atlantic liner of the future will be a streamlined, glass-enclosed speedboat capable of making the trip from New York to Southampton in 3½ days.

This wonder ship was outlined by M. Pierre de Malglaive, of the French Line, and A. C. Hardy, engineer, in a paper read at the Institute of Marine Engineers.

Air in the enclosed vessels would be conditioned. Passengers could play games on the upper decks without being buffeted by winds or annoyed by gusts from the funnels. Temperatures would be regulated in accordance with the weather.

Found After Many Years

Former Private Receives Bible Lost On French Battlefield

Twenty years ago, somewhere in the mud of a French battlefield, a private in the A. E. F. lost the pocket Bible he had carried from his Minnesota home. A letter from Australia recently told him it had been found at Queanbeyan, Australia, and would be forwarded if he would communicate with the finder. The Bible's owner is now the Rev. Samuel T. Berg, pastor of the Mosess Hill Church near Loomis, Nebraska.

EDITOR BANFF PAPER DIES

E. S. Duncan, editor of the Banff Crag and Canyon, died in hospital at Banff on Tuesday at noon from injuries received in a motor accident the previous Thursday. Howard Deegan of Banff, the alleged driver of the car, is charged with manslaughter. It is reported that Mr. Duncan was sitting on the side of the road after assisting a motorist to get his car back on the highway, when a car for which he was waiting to take him to Canmore for a hockey game, hit him. The deceased is a well known newspaper man and started his newspaper career when only eight.

Fellow newspapermen in Alberta and throughout Western Canada are grieved to learn of Mr. Duncan's untimely death and extend sympathy to the bereaved family.

Miss Heide Hubman arrived home last week-end from Vancouver for a visit.

Mr. Wellington Prosser arrived home last Monday from a few months visit in Ontario.

Mrs. J. G. Fenton and young son arrived home from the hospital on Tuesday, March 29th.

Mr. L. Alexander spent last week-end at his home here, returning to work on Monday.

Mrs. R. D. Smallwood spent the past week visiting relatives and friends in Edmonton.

Mr. D. H. Currie is reported as doing fairly well since his operation in the University hospital recently. The bus only managed to get as far as the Viking last Tuesday evening due to the condition of the highway.

Mrs. R. W. Maguire returned home from the hospital on Sunday last, apparently none the worse for her journey.

March was very pleasant and lamb-like up to the 27th, when the lion showed his teeth and blew his breath as well.

Mr. Chas. Wilbraham arrived home from Edmonton on Saturday evening, March 26th, after spending the greater part of the week in Edmonton.

March certainly gave a mighty fair, well kick, blocking the highways and other roads with snow, in some places worse than they have been for years.

Mrs. Albert Knudson received a message last Tuesday that her mother was seriously ill in Edmonton. Mrs. Knudson left for the city on the afternoon train.

Don't forget the Irma high school dramatic society play, a three-act comedy entitled "The Charm School" presented by Samuel French, the well known playwright. This will provide entertainment for young and old. Remember the date, April 14th.

Mrs. J. H. Elliott disposed of her household goods by auction on Saturday, March 26. Prices paid on the whole were fairly good. Mrs. Elliott left on the train Monday afternoon for Calgary where she will make her home with her daughter, Mrs. M. Cook.

Kinsella Kernels.

The Kinsella dramatic society will present a play, "Small Town Romeo," a comedy in three acts, in the United church, Wednesday, April 13th.

A young writer of plays, who has a delightful sense of humor, finds himself in Rushville in search of rest and a plot for his new play. In a hotel he finds all his ingredients, the mystery of the means men in town; the ghost who screams and walks in the night; the escaped jewel thief; the trailing detective; the town "Constable" with his star and his correspondence course detecting measures are all ready for him.

Come and hear how the young writer finally solves the mystery and all are happy—as they should be.

The cast: Joe Stanford, a breezy young playwright, L. Smart; Sly Perkins, the village constable, J. Hemptill; Bud Williams, the village mechanic, F. Stronach; Morton Kendall, village miser, J. The World of Wheat

By H. G. L. STRANGE
Director, "Crop Testing Plan"

Spring now has come, and the farmers' thoughts turn to the fields which are to provide the family living.

Implements will be repaired and cleaned, the seeders receiving particular attention. Wise farmers are this have made their arrangements for good seed, and are now considering the problem of treating against smut.

Seed treatment is as old as history. Virgil in his immortal poem on farming "The Georgics," written about 35 B.C., tells us:

"Oft have I seen a sower dress his seed
With soda and black lees of olive oil."

But the modern farmer has the choice of several better methods. The old standby Formaldehyde is the cheapest, but must be made up of exactly the correct strength, else the germination of the seed may be damaged.

The new mercurial dusts—Ceresan and Leytosan—are becoming increasingly popular. While more expensive, they have several advantages over formaldehyde. In the first place the dusts control not only stinking smut, but also to a great extent root rot bacteria, thus promoting a more generous and healthier rooting system, which in turn helps to keep down the weeds; all tending, therefore, to bring about higher yields.

Secondly, when Leytosan or Ceresan is used, seed can be treated several weeks before sowing, thus making the farmers' work easier and less hurried.

Grasshopper Threat In 1938

Serious outbreaks of grasshoppers have occurred during the past few seasons, resulting in extensive damage to crops. The federal department of agriculture forecasts that this danger will be prevalent during the coming season and that grasshopper eggs in significant numbers are scattered over an area of 62,839,300 acres. This is an increase of 12½ million acres over last year. It seems however, that of this entire area only about 6¼ million acres are severely infested and 11 million acres moderately infested. It is in these latter two areas that the danger of damage lies and control campaigns will be put into effect.

The grasshopper conditions for 1938 in Alberta continue to be extremely serious, the federal department states, and will require that the province continue its widespread and well-organized control campaign to avoid ruinous losses of crop in very large districts. The most striking features of the situation are the increase in the very severely infested district between Lethbridge and Calgary, the eastward spread of infested territory in the south, and the northward extension of the infested area. Fortunately a great proportion of the increase of the territory involved is but lightly infested and will not require organized control. In any area where grasshoppers were noticeably abundant in 1937 farmers should be on the alert in the early season.

Test Old Seed Before Sowing

When seed fails to germinate after sowing, real loss results, for reseeding costs money and early crop prospects vanish. Recently a gardener sent samples of lettuce, onion, beet and carrot seed to the Dominion Seed Branch Laboratory, Ottawa, for germination test. The seed was three years old and intended for use next spring. The lettuce germinated 72%, the beet 71%, the carrot 49% and the onion 2%. Three years ago, when fresh, all of these seeds germinated over 90%. These tests proved once again that some kinds of seed lose their viability quicker than others. The onion seeds were practically dead when three years old, while the beet and lettuce seeds retained reasonably high germination. The carrot seeds had declined almost 50% in the three years but was still serviceable at a heavier seeding rate. These results are typical of many tests made.

The point is that old seed should not be used before tested for germination. This may be done at home between two damp blotters or a sample may be sent to the nearest Dominion Seed Branch Laboratory.

OIL NEWS

The oil business has advanced prices wholesale and retail less than any other industry during the period of advancing prices. There is no reason based on either costs or consumer demand why these prices should be reduced at this time.

It may be that various businesses are showing a recession, the extent of which at the moment is not easy to determine. But the oil industry has had no decline in demand in contrast to that in other industries. As to its future an estimate of requirements for December indicates a demand for 300,000 barrels of crude more than during the exceptionally heavy demand in December last year. This is a gain of 10 per cent.

The surprising increase in consumption during the past three years which exceeded all estimates and surpassed all expectations, demonstrated how essential the people have found motorization in their daily life. Even in the depth of depression they cling to their cars as an aid rather than a luxury.

With prices which have not been inflated, with an inventory situation which can be corrected, and with the largest demand for petroleum products on record, the oil industry is in an exceptionally favorable position.

It has led in the emergence from the depression and it should keep on leading.—Cont.
